The Facts of Life: The Lost Episode Review - Only for Adults

By Shannon L. Novak

From the producers of the LA Weekly Theater Award-winner Mommie Queerest, Joe Everett Michaels and Tom Whitman present, The Facts of Life: The Lost Episode. Written by Jamie Morris and under the direction of Christopher Kinney, this parody play deals with many topics that welcomes adults only to this performance.

Inspired the the '80s sitcom, Facts features an all-male cast as the girls of Eastland High. The girls' dorm, and Mrs. Garrett's job is in jeopardy due to the budget cuts. The evil schoolmaster wants to take everything away from them and get into Mrs. G's pants. Blair, Tootie, Natalie and Jo will not allow this to happen, and they are willing to do anything, and I mean anything, to forbid this. The girls turn to prostitution to raise all of the money that they will need to keep their cozy dorm and Mrs. G.

Definitely a must-see if you are into raunchy and up for a performance that will leave your stomach aching from laughter. One of the highlights was a scene between Blair and Jo, which makes the audience wonder what is coming up next. Yet another with Nat and K-Y jelly, left the audience feeling, perhaps a bit nauseous. The Facts of Life: The Lost Episode will keep you amused throughout with the inappropriate humor and politically-incorrect jokes.

The musical numbers were performed well, clever and creatively written. In between scenes, well known tunes filled the air, which was a great transition to keep the audience consumed in the story. It would have been a little more enjoyable if some of the numbers were sang a bit slower, so the audience could understand all of the words in the song, which told parts of the story.

The design of the theater set is wonderful! It is easy, as the audience, to adjust to each scene and be aware of the set that exists. Costuming and make-up was equally done well, transforming the male cast into believable female characters. The theater itself is comfortable and welcoming, offering drinks and snacks for purchase prior to, and during intermission of the show.

Facts is cast well, with a lot of talent under one roof. All of the actors have a stage presence that brings the show together and keeps the audience wanting more.
